

Second Annual OSU Martin Luther King Day Symposium on Linguistics: Studies in Ancient Indo-European Languages

Sponsored by the Kenneth E. Naylor Professorship (Department of Slavic and East European Languages and Literatures) and the Historical Linguistics Study Group (Institute for Collaborative Research and the Public Humanities)

Monday 17 January 2005

9:00AM - 5:00PM

122 Oxley Hall (1712 Neil Avenue, on the Ohio State University campus)

PROGRAM:

Coffee available from 8:45 on

9:15- 9:45 -- Brian D. Joseph (OSU): 'Preliminary thoughts on Proto-Indo-European language ideology'

9:45 - 10:15 -- Julia Papke (OSU): 'Order and meaning in Sanskrit preverbs'

10:15 - 10:45 -- Hope C. Dawson (OSU): 'Exploring the a:/au variation in Rigvedic duals and locatives'

BREAK

11:00 - 11:30 -- Catalin Anghelina (OSU): 'The Greek adverbs in -t(e)i: PIE archaism or Greek morphological innovation'

11:30 - 12:00 -- Brian Turner (OSU): 'To Hell with it: the etymology of 'Hades' in its linguistic and cultural context'

LUNCH (for participants and audience, provided courtesy of the Kenneth E. Naylor Professorship)

1:00 - 1:30 -- H. Paul Brown (OSU): 'Homeric address forms and semantic deponency'

1:30 - 2:00 -- Daniel Collins (OSU): 'Disorderly conduct? The dative absolute in Slavic'

2:00 - 2:30 -- John A. C. Greppin (Cleveland State Univ.): 'Ancient Anatolian substratum in Armenian'

BREAK

2:45 - 3: 15 -- Christopher Brown (OSU): 'Loss of the dative in Greek and other I-E languages'

3: 15 - 3: 45 -- Wayne J. Redenbarger (OSU): 'The persistence of Latin noun inflections'

FEATURED SPEAKER:

3: 45 - 4:45 -- Benjamin Fortson, IV (University of Michigan): 'The etymology of Latin sōbrius'